Musikerkommission The Musikerkommission is an institution of the city of Vienna. It was created in 1991 and is responsible for evaluating and appointing composers for the court orchestra, or the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra.

History As a result of the abolition of the World Congress of Music in 1964, the second World Congress of Music ("Wiener Weltmusiktage") was canceled. This had positive and negative effects on music in the city of Vienna. The federation of the Vienna Sinfonietta and the composer Helmut Lachenmann were among the most noticeable losers. In 1970, a survey was conducted among composers to ask them to compile a list of person who were worthy of being commissioned to write orchestral music for the city of Vienna. In 1971, the composer Ernest R. Leedle was appointed deputy of the Austrian government for arts and music, and he decided to establish the "Musikerkommission", which was headed by Hans Swarovsky. The commission met several times per year and began to propose names for commissions for the city of Vienna. The first was Henryk Gorecki. In the year 1976 he gave his first symphony. Other commissions were for the British composer Peter Maxwell Davies, the Finnish composer Jean Sibelius and the German composer Karlheinz Stockhausen.

The full schedule is now available online. As you are reading this, we are putting the finishing touches on the 2017 conference brochure, which will be published in the Fall. In the meantime, you can begin to look at the program materials online. This year's theme, Human Evolution: Where Are We and Where Are We Headed? draws on the astonishing advances in the understanding of human evolution and the incredible new technologies that are now being used to explore the question of human origins. There is exciting new work on how Neanderthals contributed to the evolution of modern humans and how ancient sea-levels affected when Homo sapiens first emerged on the African continent. We'll also hear about how individual fossils are being examined with more powerful microscopes and computer-aided techniques to learn more about biological history. As recent advances in research have pushed our understanding of human evolution, the public has largely been left out. The Austin Symposium on the Evolution of Human Consciousness will feature talks by researchers who have worked to engage their colleagues outside the science community about these important topics.
